SITUATIONAL AWARENESS

People who practice situational awareness remain cognizant of their surroundings constantly. They work on their skill building when they're in new situations and places as well as when they return to very familiar situations. These practitioners understand that there are levels of risk everywhere...all the time! However, they also know that by getting in the mindset of consciously knowing what they're doing and scanning for potential risk significantly enhances their chances of avoiding harm.

In simple terms, the intent behind situational awareness is being aware of what's going on around you so you can anticipate things (and take action), ideally before it happens. How aware are you of your surroundings when you are out and about? What's the landscape and terrain like around you? Are you in a well-traveled area or on a sparsely populated street? Do you find yourself in a spot that is hidden from any public view altogether? Do you see people around you walking with purpose, simply hanging around or carefully watching others? What are your 5 senses feeding you for information?

Remember, information is power, and the more information you collect, process and evaluate the better off you will be!

Here are a few tips to keep in mind:

- ALWAYS trust your gut...if an uneasy feeling creeps up on you, there's probably good reason for it!
- Walk with a purpose and exude confidence as you do! If you appear weak, vulnerable, confused or frightened you increase your chances of becoming a victim. Remember that confidence is POWER!
- Make sure that everyone around you knows that you're 100% aware of them being there. If you've done the work to avoid being easily surprised, you've won "half the battle" already.

By practicing the art of situational awareness, you might just save a life one day...
possibly even your own!
